

ACTRESS DROPPED ON STAGE AND DIES WHEN TAKEN HOME

Hammerstein Crowd Thought
Rosabel Morrison's Work
Was Highly Realistic.

PLAYED A NEW PART.

Daughter of Famous "Me-phisto" Meets Tragic Death
From Heart Disease.

Rosabel Morrison, daughter of the late Lewis Morrison, a noted actor, died early this morning in her apartments at No. 515 West One Hundred and Thirty-fourth street. Her death was as sudden as that of her father, who was stricken in August, 1906. Rosabel Morrison, known in private life as Mrs. Mitchell Lewis, was forty-two years old and had attained considerable fame as an actress. At one time she played Marguerite to her father's Mephisto in "Faust" and continued in the part after her father's death.

On Oct. 9 Miss Morrison assumed the part of Dago Amy in Paul Armstrong's vaudeville sketch, "The Romance of the Underworld." The part had formerly been played by Mabel Morrison, her sister, who married Richard Bennett. When she gave up the part she urged that her sister be chosen to succeed her. The sketch came to New York yesterday after a trip to the coast, opening at Hammerstein's.

THE AUDIENCE THOUGHT THE SWOON WAS IN SKETCH.

Paul Armstrong, the author, who had never seen Rosabel Morrison in the part of Dago Amy, attended the performance and sat right in the front of the house. It is reported that the sketch was a success and the audience was highly entertained. Suddenly she toppled forward in a faint. She was caught by M. J. Morrison, who is no relation, but who plays the part of a detective. The stage detective carried the unconscious woman off the stage in his arms. It happened near the close of Miss Morrison's part and the audience thought the swooning was a part of her act and applauded the cleverness of the scene.

In the audience, among those who applauded the cleverness of the scene, was Mitchell Lewis, an actor and husband of Mrs. Morrison, who died several years ago. It was said that the sketch did not run very well, and that when a crowd went back of the scenes and found that it was not acting but real life. Dr. H. L. Reis, of the Hotel Cadillac, was summoned and he attended to her. Dr. Maurice Packard, of No. 363 West Seventy-ninth street, was called in later, but Miss Morrison died a few minutes after her arrival home.

Dr. Packard reported the sudden death to the coroner's office and Coroner Winterbottom investigated. It was found that Miss Morrison was suffering from a cold and had been taking a large number of cough drops. The effects of these drops on her heart, which was weak, caused the sudden collapse and death.

Miss Morrison's father, Lewis Morrison, was famous the country over for his part of "Mephisto" in his dramatization of "Faust." He played the part for thirty years.

Travelogue in a Church.
Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, in West One Hundred and Fourth street, between Columbus and Amsterdam avenues, will try an interesting experiment in answer to the question, "Why should churches be idle six days in the week?" The progressive pastor, Rev. Christian Reiser, has arranged for a series of travelogues with pictures, to begin tonight and continue nightly through the week. Frank A. Robinson will conduct them. A nominal admission will be charged.

Sixteen Pages of Laughs.
Many of the most humorous acts, pictures, comedies, and vaudeville sketches, will go to make a star number of the new Sunday's World. This number will also contain a free guide to the city of New York and a rattling good story by Rev. McDaniel.
